We acknowledge the Traditional Custodians of all the lands on which we live and work, and pay our respects to Elders past, present and emerging. We recognise that these lands and waters have always been places of teaching, research and learning.

Current biodiversity and land management:
It is a confusing tangled web!!

When I first started within my NRM Role – this is how confusing everything felt.

And then there's the Local and Federal Government agencies!!

Where it all started

How far we've come... We have grown as a ranger team and community, who have learned together, and made networks with NRM agencies and hope to continue to learn and work together.

Why is it so important for us as Indigenous people to work with NRM agencies?

As Indigenous people we need to continue to build our cultural confidence and voice and together with NRM agencies, foster stronger relationships – this will enable us as Indigenous people to take care of our country using our traditional methods as well as partnering our techniques with western science to get the best outcome for country.
