

Social Sciences

The following diagram shows seven key perspectives that the social sciences can bring in supporting the building of capacity of land managers, planners and emergency services personnel in the way they work with communities and employees. These are also key areas where case studies from bushfire management experiences may inform community engagement in other sectors. These perspectives aim to give a sense of the whole, rather than be clearly demarcated categories.

